Description

Religious buildings built in the thirteenth century as a place of worship dedicated to St. Michael. Enlarged in 1377 in late Romanesque style and Gothic influences. Reconsecrated in 1502 by Pope Alexander VI on the occasion of his visit to Piombino. In 1806 it was dedicated to Sant'Antimo for the suppression of the previous church of the same name, no longer officiated and incorporated into the building of the old hospital. The Co-cathedral was restored in the twentieth century. During the renovation, the façade was rearranged, a canopy was added to protect the mosaic visible on the entrance portal and the left nave was built thanks to the union of two ancient chapels.
